

Tracking Owney

This is a comprehensive list of all of the places where Owney is known to have traveled in his years as the unofficial mascot of the Railway Mail Service (1888-1897). This list was compiled using newspaper articles written about Owney's travels, tags and other items he was given during his travels, with the help of historical railroad maps and the assistance of local historical societies around the United States. Due to the lack of written records for many of Owney's travels, it is impossible to confirm every location and date in his story. This list has been organized to reflect that.

The Tracking Owney list is organized and color coded (see key below) by the strength of information confirming the dog's travel date and location. First, by dates that are positively confirmed with a specific date and location; secondly by locations that have been narrowed to a month; and finally, those that can only be traced to sometime within a specific year. At the end of this document is a list of locations for which dates have not yet been confirmed. If you have additional information about any of these or other locations to which Owney traveled during his lifetime, please contact the National Postal Museum. Locations that were confirmed through objects in the collection of the National Postal Museum are underlined linked to pages which contain more information about the objects themselves as well as how they relate to Owney's story.

Color Key: Black = location and date confirmed
 Purple = location and approximate month/year confirmed
 Blue = location and approximate year confirmed—these are listed below the confirmed locations/dates for each year
